Today's Reading: John 10:11-18

Jesus warns his disciples against shepherds who are not to be trusted. Those who are hired hands, working for pay, and whose only interest is their own well-being and self-preservation are to be avoided. Jesus desires to stay close to his flock, whom he longs to rescue from the grip of self-love, alienation and even despair. He was willing to carry out God's saving plan with his very life. As the Easter season unfolds, may we encounter Jesus the Good Shepherd as the one sent by God to lead us to the loving mercy of God within the community of his body, the church. In these Easter days, may we encounter in Jesus the Good Shepherd the divine care, providential protection, and daily guidance we seek, as we pray in faith, "Speak to me, Lord."

Jesús advierte a sus discípulos contra los pastores en quienes no se puede confiar. Deben evitarse aquellos que son trabajadores asalariados, que trabajan por un salario y cuyo único interés es su propio bienestar y autoconservación. Jesús desea permanecer cerca de su rebaño, a quien anhela rescatar de las garras del amor propio, de la alienación e incluso de la desesperación. Jesús estaba dispuesto a llevar a cabo el plan salvador de Dios con su propia vida. A medida que se desarrolla la temporada de Pascua, podamos encontrarnos con Jesús, el Buen Pastor, como el enviado de Dios para guiarnos a la amorosa misericordia de Dios dentro de la comunidad de su cuerpo, la iglesia. Que en estos días de Pascua podamos encontrar en Jesús el Buen Pastor el cuidado divino, la protección providencial y la guía diaria que buscamos, mientras oramos con fe: "Háblame, Señor".
